RALLY FOR ISLAM PUT ON HOLD AS NF ANNOUNCE COUNTER DEMO

This years 'Rally for Islam' was going to be one of the biggest and best ever. People who attended were going to witness 'miracles never seen before' where people from other religions alongside atheist's, would suddenly feel the urge to become converted to Islam.

We would also hear testaments from various people that had 'led miserable lives' before finding Islam, and therefore embracing a true meaning in life. All this was to take place at the foot of Nelson's Column in Trafalgar square, which, has become synonymous over the years for political and religious events of all shapes and sizes.

If we only witnessed half of what was promised on the billing it was going to be something of a spectacular. But there was one tiny detail that was missing and one that the organisers should really have dealt with. Nobody gave them permission to hold such an event to begin with. Perhaps somebody, somewhere felt that they didn't need to ask. If we only witnessed half of what was promised on the billing it was going to be something of a spectacular. But there was one tiny detail that was missing and one that the organisers should really have dealt with. Nobody gave them permission to hold such an event to begin with. Perhaps somebody, somewhere felt that they didn't need to ask. After all, they held a Rally two years earlier without permission albeit cut short by two hours because of the presence of the National Front contingent that had gathered to oppose it. It was then discovered that the leader of Al-Muhajiroun, Anjem Choudary, was indeed successfully prosecuted by the Greater London Authority over this very same Rally some two years earlier under the Trafalgar Square byelaws. Tony Stewart from the GLA made an announcement that "Al-Muhajiroun did not have permission to hold a Rally on Trafalgar Square and didn't apply for permission. A letter was sent to the UK leader of Al-Muhajiroun Anjem Choudary asking him to confirm that he is not intending to hold a demonstration in the Square but no response was received".

Opposition Plans.

The NF immediately held talks and decided that the Rally must, and would be opposed at all costs. We announced our activity on the main NF website the same day, and were taking enquiries for the event only minutes after it's announcement. Once our intentions had been made, speculation and opinions were going backwards and forward in the media. Shortly after, one of our senior members received a telephone call from a senior Sikh official, who announced that they too were planning on bringing a contingent to oppose Al-Muhajiroun. To top it all, we then noticed a posting on a well known left-wing internet site. The supporters of this band of misfits really had their work cut out, as they were calling to oppose both the NF

Ham-za offered spicy pork chops in jail

Hamza tucks in?

A prison boss has apologised to Abu Hamza after he was offered spicy pork chops for dinner. Hamza who is awaiting extradition to the US on terrorism charges was reported to be furious. Governor Geoff Hughes was forced to send a letter of apology to all inmates, he then ordered pork to be removed from the menu's of ALL inmates including non-Muslims. Hamza's latest plot from his prison cell is said to be that he is too ill to face trial in the US. It is unclear to us at NF news whether the spicy pork chops has any connection with his

7,000 BRIT JOBS LOST TO INDIA IN 3 YEARS

Norwich Union, one of Britain's biggest insurers sparked fury recently by announcing they were to switch over 1000 jobs to Asia. By 2007 that figured would have reached 7,000.

With the industry growing at over 20% a year, it is expected two million Indians will be working in out-sourcing in five years' time. They will be paid the equivalent of about $150 (£87) a month. This is less than one-tenth of what a call centre worker in the UK earns, but in India this is good pay - more than a newly qualified doctor earns. The hours may be long, but the promotion to management comes quickly. Ironically, this is coming about due to the legacy of spoken English left behind after India gained independence from Britain nearly 50 years ago.

NF NEWS REVIEW: Edge of the city

As Channel 4's 'Race Row' documentary was finally aired, we ask was anybody really surprised by it's findings?

Edge of the City, a documentary on Bradford's social services, was finally screened by Channel 4 after being dropped in May when police warned it could inflame racial tensions at local election time.

This 'unprecedented' decision followed a warning from the Chief Constable of West Yorkshire Police that the timing of the programme would increase community tensions and provoke public disorder in Bradford. The wheels of the programme's publicity department first starting grabbing attention by announcing to an already anticipated public "These are the neighbours we don't want to know, whose problems we don't want to see,"

In July 2001 Bradford took centre stage for some of the worst race riots Britain has seen for over 20 years. Battles raged between White youths and local Asians and resulted in millions of pounds worth of damage. This event had a domino effect in surrounding towns throughout northern England with Leeds, Oldham and Burnley becoming casualties of the unruly mobs. The eager eye of the press lapped up the unrest and hysterical headlines announcing 'summer of violence' became almost commonplace.

The National Front were regularly mentioned in newspaper and radio reports during the disturbances in an almost pathetic attempt to try and conveniently tie in the name of the NF as the sole reason for the ongoing civil unrest. What was quite evident was that the Anti Nazi League were doing their best to drum up support in and around the town previous to the unrest, whipping up the local Asians into believing there was a contingent of NF supporters congregating in a

So when producer-director Anna Hall's Channel four documentary 'edge of the city' suddenly appeared in the TV listings, nobody took much notice, least of all the people of Bradford. Edge of the city was a documentary about Bradford social services and was shot over a twelve month period. But some elements of the programme contained "startling and shocking evidence" that young girls as young as eleven years of age were being 'groomed' for sex. These facts which apparently disturbed the establishment so much, turned out to be something which many residents of Bradford and Keighley were already well aware of.

Predators

Lita Haliburton is a community team manager with Bradford social Services. Lita made comments in the programme that young school children are targeted by young Asian men who drive around the schools during break time. The ages of the girls targeted are usually from the age of 11 upwards, with the predators favourite target being girls of low self esteem.

It is believed by the Asian predators that the bigger and faster the car you drive around in, the bigger draw of attention you will receive from the young girls. Once initial contact has been made with the very naive children, it is thought the behaviour of the Asians start innocently enough. But over the next week or two gifts will be given to the children and rides offered. These young girls now find themselves introduced into a new and exciting world of 'cruising', riding the streets in fast cars, music blaring, and doing things they have only ever heard of older girls doing. They are led into a

The girls are known locally as "Paki Shaggers" and will more often than not, be taken by the Asians onto the dark and desolate Keighley moors where they are sexually abused. What is also alarming is that an early part of the grooming process practiced by these Asians involves teaching the girls how to lie about their ages to the Police to evade prosecution.

Drug Abuse

Soon after the initial introduction to their new found 'boyfriends' the abuse begins. The girls are used as drug runners, prostitutes and usually find themselves on hard drugs themselves. Once this point has been reached, it is almost impossible to turn back. The hard drugs the girls find themselves addicted to, make sure the Asian dealers are never too far away. This makes the chain of abuse even harder to break. One woman whose daughter was locked in a flat and systematically raped for over 2 hours by four Asian men, was warned that should her daughter press charges against them her house would be firebombed, and her daughter shot through the head. Social services ended up taking the girl into care at a cost of £5000 a week after she tried to overdose on Heroin.

Perhaps the most astonishing if not ridiculous comment was made once again by Social services leader Lita Haliburton who said of the abusing Asians: "I think it's a case of misogyny, it's not culture and it's not race that abuses these young women, what abuses them, the rape, is the misogynist attitudes and the attitude that girls can be used for sex and exchanged so lightly and used". If there was ever a case of not seeing the wood for the trees this was it. Perhaps Ms Haliburton simply didn't

This was not the case. When it became apparent there were no NF members in the area, the anger and frustrations soon turned on the now quickly arriving armoured Police.

326 officers were injured during the disturbances, leading to two stabbings, 219 arrests and an estimated £27m worth of damage. After the rioting had ceased, it emerged over a thousand Police officers and support staff had helped to suppress the rioters with nine Police forces sending assistance as the disorder threatened to overwhelm West Yorkshire officers. Operation Wheel was the criminal investigation launched after the riot, under the command of a senior investigating officer and was later described by the Crown Prosecution Service as the largest criminal investigation in the UK. Once the names of the rioters were matched with the faces captured by Police video unit's the arrests quickly came. They are led into a false sense of security by being told they are 'special'. The word 'Girlfriend' is often used by the Asians and used early on in this 'relationship' to make these young and naïve girls believe they indeed are special. But this is of course the initial steps into the world of grooming. In this world, the vulnerability of a young child is exploited by ugly arrogant paedophiles who wish nothing more than to use these poor defenceless beings to satisfy their primal sexual urges. Once abused for the first time, the young girl will be released with words still ringing in her ears of how special she is, and how she has made her new 'boyfriend' feel so lucky to have her. Little does she know, It won't be long before his friends will feel what it is like to have her also. There has been evidence to suggest that it is not too long before illegal substances are used on the young girls as a means of control. One girl who appeared on the programme estimated she had been passed around to over 100 men. She was still only 13 years old. Other girls have said they have been raped and locked in flats while they

Even when confronted with such comprehensive evidence we witness the barriers coming up, no doubt not wanting to be seen as making a 'racist' comment. New laws have been passed this year announcing that penetrative sex with a child under the age of 13 is classed as rape and carries a life sentence, however this law is not retrospective and therefore cannot apply to the incidents in Keighley. Since the programme was made 10 people in Keighley have been charged with offences such as Rape, threats to kill, abduction and witness intimidation. In November 2003 the first batch of pathetic convictions started to hit the headlines. A 24 year old man, Delwar Hussain was among them. Hussein was found guilty of two separate counts of sexual assault and was imprisoned for just 15 months. His victim was a young white girl who was just 12 years old.

Once the names of the rioters were matched with the faces captured by Police video unit's the arrests quickly came. Over 100 Asian men were given prison sentences ranging from violent disorder to carrying offensive weapons. Local Asian leaders immediately set up a campaign to support the Asian men charged in the riot. Almost immediately, 1800 of the 4000-odd Asian people living in one area signed a petition which read: "The young men acted in defence of the community and we entirely support their actions. The police were outnumbered and unable to protect the area." This was done without the Asians seeing a single scrap of evidence.

Three years on and not much has changed in Bradford. This is not the multi-cultural place where relationships are once again being forged and bridges built between black and white, but where young Asians feel they rule the roost and whites constantly feel hard done by. The mental scars are still very much evident of the rioting some three years earlier.

Other girls have said they have been raped and locked in flats while they have been passed around by a number of men who have raped them both vaginally and anally. Some girls do not always remember the details as they are given a liquid form of the so called 'date rape drug' GHB.

In Keighley the cases are just as bad. One mother who appeared in the programme in disguise said her daughter had been groomed for over three years. Her daughter would often accompany friends who would sit and wait on a wall along a local main road or hang around on corners waiting for the Asians to turn up in their cars. The Asians will often tour the area looking for the girls in a similar fashion to a kerb crawler taking their pick on the waiting children.

Conclusion

The fuss and bother that was anticipated with this programme never really came. The reason? It was met with the apathy it warranted probably because it wasn't such a big surprise to people who live in and around Bradford's Asian community and witness this kind of behaviour everyday. The last quote should probably be left to somebody who knows best. The mother of the young girl raped for two hours by four Asian men overheard some Asians speaking to her daughter outside her home who said, "us Paki's are going to have to watch what we do with you young ones now because they are starting to come down on us for it". Her mother responded: "There was no thought that they were doing something wrong. I don't want any riots, I don't want any bad feeling between cultures, but I don't want my daughter to be sexually abused so this can carry on being a nice quiet town".

NF In major Oldham activity

As another young white man falls victim to Asian thugs, we take to the streets and estates of Oldham

THE stunned parents of a 21-year-old man disfigured in a brutal attack said they could not recognise him in his hospital bed. Anthony Gilday, of Curlew Road, Holts, was left with a broken jaw, broken cheekbone and cuts causing the skin to tear off his face and had to undergo surgery after thugs battered him on Waterloo Street.

The water company worker was walking home alone after a night out in Oldham.. His parents, Michael and Elaine Gilday, have today spoken of their anger at his ordeal. Mrs Gilday said: "I knew as soon as I opened the door to the police that it was Anthony. He is my only son, and I knew where his three sisters were. "As soon as I found out what had happened, I felt sick to my stomach. When we saw him we could not recognise him, he was so badly beaten. "We are told he won't need any more operations. He is a good-spirited person, and he has not been down. "He appreciates the full impact of what has happened to him, but I think he could still be in delayed shock. "We are all extremely angry about this. People around the Holts estate were in tears when they heard, because they know what a nice lad he is. "He usually goes out with friends at the weekend, but hadn't lately, because he was saving up for the holiday he was due to go on in two weeks time — his first time abroad. He said it was killing him staying in. "We know the police have made progress, and we want to see the people responsible brought to justice as soon as possible." The gang of four thugs, believed to be Asian men, also stole Anthony's wallet and mobile phone. Police investigations are ongoing. An angry mob of young people gathered in Holts last night, threatening revenge for the vicious attack on Anthony Gilday.

Feelings run high

NF Appear in Oldham

Members and supporters from different parts of the country met up with their counterparts on Saturday 4th September who had travelled in from other parts of the country to support the North West event in Oldham. This was in response to the horrific attack on young Anthony Gilday. After meeting at our assembly point, we quickly moved onto the Holts estate where the reception we received from the locals was truly fantastic. In fact, we received one of the best receptions we think we have witnessed for a very long time. The weather was hot and at one point, some people living in the area we were leafleting were walking around the housing estate looking for us in order to offer us re-

Feelings run high

Feelings were running high among about 120 youngsters who gathered outside Holts Village Estate Management Board hall after hearing of Sunday's unprovoked attack on the 21-year-old. Management board chairman Chris Wright confronted the gathering of people, aged from about 12 to 25, and appealed for calm. He said this morning: "They were fuming, and they were talking about going into Glodwick on Friday night to 'get their own back'. He added: "The situation is very volatile — like a tinder box smouldering — and I'm afraid it might spark off another riot. "I have never seen so many youngsters gathered together. They were both male and female, from Holts and Alt, and were very angry." Mr Wright urged the youngsters to leave the matter to the police and not to take the law into their own hands. He said: "I and the other officers on the management board are appealing to parents to please make sure they know where their children are, who they are with, where they are going and what they are doing." He was also trying to contact Oldham East and Saddleworth MP Phil Woolas this morning to ask for his help in calming the situation.

People we spoke with were quick to condemn the horrific attack on young Anthony with many stating they knew the young man to be well liked and it was therefore not surprising that people wanted to avenge his attack. Two teams were covering the area and gave out nearly two thousand leaflets and newspapers. After we completed leafleting two large housing estates including Holts we continued into Dukinfield. Once again we split into two teams and another thousand-odd leaflets were distributed. Shortly after we completed that little lot, we went our separate ways but members from the NFSE team continued further north into Keighley, scene of the recent Channel 4 documentary on the grooming of young white children by Asian Paedophiles. (see page two). Here we gave out hundreds of leaflets warning parents of the dangers of these sexual deviants and the manner in which they operate (as if many of them didn't already know). We met with many locals who voiced their concerns and some offering us very useful information and assistance. Once again the reception was fantastic. We are in talks with locals about monitoring this situation further as we truly believe that this documentary did nothing more than merely scratch the surface on what is a much bigger problem.

Aberdeen St Andrew's parade causes more controversy

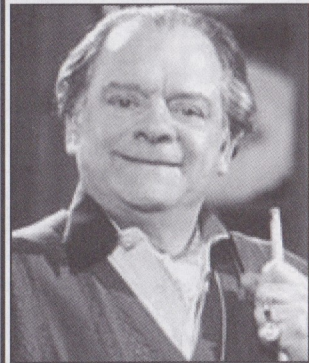

NF Scotland's plans to hold a St Andrews day parade through the streets of Aberdeen have caused a considerable stir. It appears that since NF Scotland organiser Dave MacDonald announced that the parade would be held on 28th November, different organisations have been lining up in order to try and do everything they possibly can in order to hijack the event. Even an 'Anti-English' organisation called the Scottish patriots have promised to turn out to oppose the NF. It seemed the whole affair accelerated to almost hysterical levels after it was announced on the Natfront.com website that leading NF supporters and officials were travelling to Aberdeen from all over Britain to oversee the event. The press of course then created distorted and alarming visions for the public by announcing that this was going to turn into some sort of day trip for hooligans. This type of hysteria was further fuelled by a Aberdeen united against fascism spokesperson by the name of Donald Munro who announced "I think there is a good chance there will be trouble".

It seemed that everybody was patiently waiting in line to accuse the NF of wrong-doing with most of it finding its way into print. However it must also be pointed out that Dave MacDonald had a reasonable crack of the whip in the newspaper report which read as follows: An Indian critic of the National Front's planned march through Aberdeen has been told "he is living here on borrowed time". The Scottish organiser of the National Front, Dave MacDonald, was speaking after the president of the Indian Society of North-east Scotland, Kapil Kumar, spoke out against the march. Speaking at the society's Indian Independence Day celebrations at the weekend, Mr Kumar called the NF a "scourge" that would "pollute" the city. Mr MacDonald allegedly said: "As far as we are concerned it is certainly not his city and he should not really be here anyway. "It has nothing to do with him and he should realise as far as we are concerned he is living here on borrowed time."

Del Boy Gagged Axe for race jokes

Supposed Racist language is to be cut from comedy classics such as Only Fools And Horses.

The BBC plans to edit the first episode of the sitcom following a complaint about the word "Paki". Other favourites including Fawlty Towers could be next. In the 1981 Fools and Horses episode the Russians are Coming, Del stocks up just in case of a nuclear war. But Granddad says that even a nuclear holocaust would not "stop a Paki shop from opening". And in Fawlty Towers the Major explains the difference between "niggers and wogs".

Man held over serial attacks

An alleged serial attacker who preyed on lone women has been arrested following a tip-off from the public.

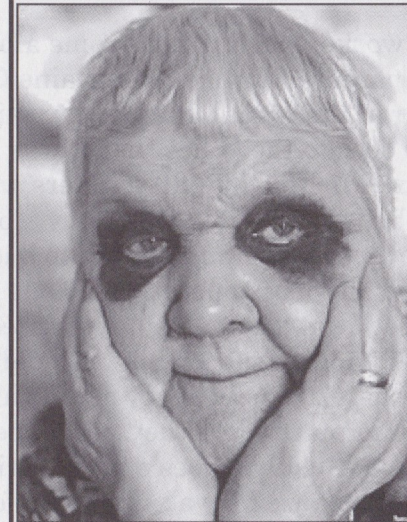

Junior Easy, 38, seen on the right, was found at his Rotherhithe home when cops led an early-morning raid. The swoop followed an appeal by local radio and newspapers to catch the vicious robber who targeted vulnerable women walking in deserted spots. Easy is accused of smashing a 56-year-old woman's head against the platform at North Dulwich station on May 7. She suffered horrendous facial injuries as her bag was snatched. Easy also faces two charges of robbery at South Bermondsey train station.

In the first, on June 22, a woman in her 30s (seen in picture above) was hit with an iron bar and had her bag snatched. On July 28, another 56-year-old woman was savagely beaten and her handbag taken. Easy, from the Silverlock Estate, Rotherhithe, appeared at Horseferry Road Magistrates' Court on Saturday. He was remanded in custody

JUST 5 YEARS FOR THUG THAT DID THIS!

A ROBBER who battered a weeping widow in her armchair was caged for just five years.

Stephen Blyth, 19, was high on drink and drugs when he broke into 77-year-old Doris Sharp's home and smashed her six times in the face.

A court heard he ordered diabetic Doris, who had been asleep, to stop crying or he would punch her harder.

He then grabbed her round the throat before escaping with £29.50.

Doris, of Washington, Tyne and Wear, needed hospital treatment for her injuries, including bruising which closed her eye.

Blyth, of no fixed address, was nailed by a fingerprint. He admitted burglary at Newcastle Crown Court and was sent to a young offenders' institute.

BRITISH ISLAMIC BANK SET TO OPEN

The Financial Services Authority has given the go-ahead for the launch of the first bank to operate under strict Islamic law.

For the first time, Britain's 1.8 million Muslims will be able to keep their money in an institution complying with Islamic Sharia principles.

The Islamic Bank of Britain, which has headquarters in Birmingham, opened it's first branch in September in Edgware Road, London, others followed in Birmingham and Leicester.

The former home office minister Barbara Roche today called on the Saudi government to waive immunity for a Saudi diplomat alleged to have indecently assaulted a young girl.

The Saudi man, a 41-year-old, was arrested after being accused of attacking an 11-year-old girl in West London. He was taken to a west London police station, but was released after claiming diplomatic immunity. The Metropolitan police said no further action could be taken.

An inquiry has been launched into how agencies responsible for protecting youngsters from sex offenders allowed a serial paedophile to be housed just yards from a Birmingham children's home.

The investigation was announced last night after Patrick Marsh (60) was jailed for four-and-a-half years for kidnapping a 13-year-old boy in local authority care.

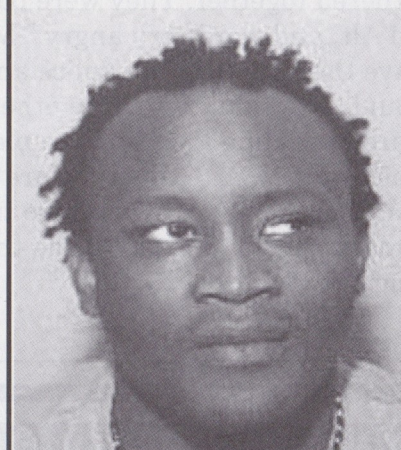

Birmingham Crown Court was told Marsh had been sentenced on two previous occasions to five-year prison terms for sex offences. When police - monitoring his activities as a registered sex offender - arrested him five months ago, they found four young boys from the care home in his flat.

The court heard how police became suspicious after spotting children entering Marsh's flat. When they raided it they found pornographic DVDs and magazines, as well as children's toys such as Action Man.

She was so traumatised she even considered throwing herself to her death to escape. After a chance meeting, Adile tricked her back to his flat in Newcastle's west end. He chatted to her about his native Africa and said he had been shopping for groceries and needed to drop off a few things for his son at the flat.

While in the flat he talked normally, before suddenly exploding into a violent rage.

"He slammed the door and locked it. I didn't know how to escape. He even told me he had a dead body in the bedroom. I was scared of what he would do to me," said the victim, who was at Newcastle Crown Court during Adile's week-long trial. "He destroyed my life. He is a monster and I was afraid I would not get out alive," she added. Adile was jailed for eight years after holding the student captive and subjecting her to up to five rapes and other degrading sex acts.

All smiles. Ali (right) settles down in Okara

Lib Dem Councillor flees Pakistan for Britain fearing for his life, then pops back for a holiday.

A Manchester Councillor who claimed he faced death in his homeland of Pakistan has been caught out returning there for an 18 day break where he even had time to take in a wedding.

Liaquat Ali was allowed to settle in Britain after telling the home office that he was a wanted man in his homeland because of his active campaigns against slavery, and would be killed if he returned. So it must have been one hell of a wedding invitation that tempted the father of NINE back to Pakistan. He attended his son Mohammed's wedding in Okara, which is around 70 miles from Lahore. As you can see in the above picture, thoughts of lynching mobs seem to be the furthest thing from Mr Ali's mind as he settles down with fellow Lib Dem John Commons at his son's wedding.

Last year Ali caused a storm when it was revealed that it was costing taxpayers a small fortune to employ a translator to inform the newly elected Mr Ali as to what on earth was going on during council meetings. Now in another twist it turns out that Saijad Hussain, the former councillor that Mr Ali won his seat from has stated "I believe there are grounds to investigate this case and I would like to see that happen". But Mr Ali hit back by declaring it was an act of bravery that saw him run the gauntlet in Pakistan. Mr Ali revealed (through a translator of course) For my son's wedding I took this risk and because my mother was sick". We know how she feels Mr Ali!

Councillor Ali.
He fears for his life...only when it suits him of course.

MELTING POT BRITAIN

Ethnic epidemic continues to rise throughout Britain

Britain continues to turn into a multicultural cess pit as more and more ethnic minorities continue to grow it has recently been revealed.

In some areas of Britain it has now been officially conformed that one in five residents are non white with London being the most prominent with some boroughs now with ethnic majorities. These recent figures have been issued by in a recent survey by the Office for National Statistics which takes it's findings from the 2001 Census. Much of the increase is among the Asian population which has kept up booming birth rates while the number of white people have fallen.

Across London more than 30% of people reported themselves as non-white with 11%, the largest ethnic grouping, claiming to be black. But it is parts of East London where the trend is most prominent with 42% of the residents in and around the White-chapel area made up of Bangladeshi's and Pakistanis. On top of this, a further 6.7% are black which leaves only around 45% of the remaining population claiming they are white. This trend is following suit across the country. In Slough, Berks, 40% of the population are from ethnic minorities, a figure almost matched in Luton and further up the country in Leicester. In Manchester less than four in every five people are white. Those figures are almost matched in Bradford West Yorks. Across the West Midlands it is a similar sorry tale with over 20% saying they are non-white. An Office for national statistics insider was noted to have said "the findings are remarkable, but we must guard against the cultural and religious issues that could prove divisive".

Just recently, the British legal system showed us exactly why we will NEVER stop highlighting black on white attacks and murders in our country.

The mother of a teenager knifed to death by a pensioner in an argument over an umbrella spoke of her grief after the man accused of murder walked free from court. Terry Gregory, 19, was stabbed nine times. His friend Sammy Nelson, also 19, received a deep cut to his hand as he tried to ward off blows from the knife in the clash. Grandfather George Edwin, 66, was charged with murder and causing grievous bodily harm to Mr Nelson in the Woolwich attack. But after two trials at Inner London Crown Court ended in deadlock, Judge Jonathan van der Werf ruled it would be "cruelly onerous" for the pensioner to face a third trial, which could not start before next May. The jury in the second trial had acquitted Edwin on the GBH charge and Victor Temple, QC, told the court the "convention" of the Crown Prosecution Service was to offer no evidence on the murder charge after two such unresolved trials. Mr Gregory was a swimming pool lifeguard with 12 GCSEs. Today his mother Sue, 47, said she had been left "devastated" by the outcome. She added: "This man was not found guilty or not guilty, and now we are denied any type of justice. It is a disgrace. Everyone in the community is in uproar. No one can believe what's happened - even the police are shocked. "We will not be letting this go. I would like a change in the law so this can never happen again. A man walks out of court having stabbed my son nine times, he has admitted in court to carrying a knife and is now free to do it again. "Terry was loved and respected by all who knew him. He was a loving and hard-working young man who had all his life to look forward to." The court had heard that Edwin, from Charlton, stabbed his victim with such force the blows penetrated the bone and included two wounds to the back after he had collapsed. Edwin told the court he had no memory of the stabbing so he could offer no explanation, although it was suggested the victim may have fallen or been pushed on to his knife. The attack happened three days after Christmas. Mr Nelson, Mr Gregory and his girlfriend Louise Reed, 16, had been out for a drink in Charlton and were on a night bus shortly after 1am. They encountered Edwin when he boarded with his girlfriend and two other women. Mr Gregory had jumped off the bus to collect an umbrella his companion had left at the stop when Edwin suddenly snatched it from his grasp. The teenager threw a punch at the pensioner, who rejoined the three women on the bus as the friends decided to walk home. As they reached Church Street, Woolwich, Miss Reed saw Edwin marching towards them and producing a knife. The court heard how Mr Nelson was left with severed tendons and muscles after trying to block the first blow. As he stumbled away, Edwin turned on Mr Gregory. Miss Reed told the jury she believed her boyfriend was being punched and only realised he had been stabbed as he stumbled bleeding towards her and collapsed in the road. Edwin fled the scene while Miss Reed called an ambulance. At Queen Elizabeth Hospital Mr Gregory was pronounced dead and found to have a punctured heart, lung and liver through stab wounds to his chest and back

Donations

We understand this is not everybody's favourite part but unfortunately we need funding in order to survive. We need funding for election work, activities, running of branches, phone calls etc. the list sometimes seems endless. So any kind of financial aid is always welcome and there are many ways in which you can help.

Stamps

We urgently require stamps for sending out various literature. We also intend to do mail outs in areas that do not have an active unit covering that area.

Stationary and Hardware appeal

We are in need of computer hardware such as old printers or any other peripherals along with any stationary. This is always useful when setting up new units around the country.

Mobile Phones

Are of great benefit to us as they are essential for setting up new active units to enable the public to contact us.

Active Units.

Active units are being encouraged all over the country. If you are prepared to put yourself forward to distribute leaflets etc, please do not hesitate in contacting us. If there is not an active unit or official branch near to where you live, then why not take the initiative and make a start on one yourself? You will be given all the help and advice you need to set up and run the unit in your area. All you need is the willingness to promote the name of the National Front.

Justice For Jason

A website has been launched to aid the capture and conviction of the killer of Jason Spence. Although still in it's infancy, you can find it at www.justiceforjason.com
